Rev. Fr. Pierangelo C. Repuyan, PhD | dean.cathedral@bunburycatholic.org.au | 28 April 2024 | 5th Sunday of Easter | Year B, Cycle II

We acknowledge the traditional custodians of country throughout the South West and recognise their continuing connection to land, waters and culture. We pay our respects to their Elders past, present and emerging.

*“If you remain in me,
ask and you shall get it.”*

SCRIPTURE REFLECTION. “GOD IS GREATER THAN OUR CONSCIENCE” reveals John in the second reading. The text alludes to conscience as some form of ‘internal tribunal’ where our actions are judged by God. In this ‘internal tribunal’, our conscience may play the role of ‘plaintiff’ accusing us of transgression. We may have experienced this already when we felt we had a ‘guilty conscience’ after doing something we realise post facto as immoral or sinful. As accused, we play the role of ‘defendant’ either pleading guilty or vigorously justifying our actions contrary to conscience’s accusations levelled against us. In this instance, we sometimes use the expression, “my conscience is bugging me” because internally, we are going through some form of ‘moral upheaval.’ When this happens, all we wish is to know the truth that will somehow pacify us and some peace of mind to calm us down. When we are ‘at peace,’ we feel our conscience is in harmony with our whole being.

John implicitly points to this human experience and reminds us that while our conscience may be the ‘voice of God’ within us, there might still be vagueness and incoherence in the realm of decision making or moral discernment. The Church acknowledges that this may happen and that is why it always emphasises the necessity to form our conscience. The lack or absence of conscience formation may result into our inability to seek the truth that affects our moral discernment.

‘IF YOU REMAIN IN ME, ASK AND YOU SHALL GET IT’ is the confident statement of the author of the fourth Gospel. Using the metaphor of the ‘vine-branches,’ Christ stresses that for us to live a flourishing life, we need to be continually ‘attached’ to Christ. He makes it crystal clear that if we cut ourselves off from God, ‘we can do nothing.’ This relationship that we are called to as exemplified by the above metaphor underlines the need for an appropriate conscience formation that opens up the reality of drawing wisdom and prudence from God. If we cut ourselves off from God, we should persistently ask the question wherefrom do we actually draw moral guidance for our moral decision making and spiritual discernment. The lack or absence of conscience formation is the manifestation of a life where God is not sought. This experience is saddening since the human self has become numb to the ‘begging’ of one’s conscience. Truth is lost. Eternal life drifts away. Heaven forbids.
